YAZOO CITY, MISSISSIPPI

Mississippi Was First.

Seeing a statement in the Hall of Fame, to the effect that West Virginia was the first State in the Union to erect a Confederate monument Senator C. H. Frith, of Amite county, challenged the claim, and demanded the proof. The statement is to the effect that West Virginia erected a Confederate monument in 1887, and was the first State to confer this honor on the heroes of the lost cause. Senator Frith has the documents to prove that Liberty erected a Confederate monument in 1886, one year after the close of the war and one year before the monument was built in West Virginia. It is thus proven that this was the first monument erected to perpetuate the glory and honor of the boys in gray and puts Mississippi ahead of all other States.

The Confederate monument at Liberty was first suggested by women of that section, and they raised most of the money by their individual efforts. Senator Frith was present at the laying of the corner stone of the Liberty monument and says that he recalls the speeches made on that occasion by Col. Moses Jackson, Hon. H. S. Van Eaton and Col. C. P. Neilson. The documents to prove that the first Confederate monument was erected in Mississippi will be filed in the Hall of Fame.—Clarion-Ledger.

FRIGHTFULLY BURNED.

Chas. W. Moore, a machinist, of Ford City, Pa., had his hand frightfully burned in an electrical furnace. He applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve with the usual result: "a quick and perfect cure." Greatest healer on earth for Burns, Wounds, Sores, Eczema and Piles. 25c at R. S. Wholesale, the Druggist.

Free Schools and Taxes.

The wisdom of free schools has no connection with parents paying taxes, or assisting poor parents who are willing to educate their children; the parents' wish or inclinations are not in it, but strictly the children's based upon the fact that intelligent citizenship is best for the country, and that every little fellow should have the opportunity of improvement. This applies to the negro as well as to the white children, for even animals are valued for their intelligence, and all moral and scientific teaching attributes troubles to ignorance. The white man's claim to rule is from this source and coupled with it justice to the inferior.

Though statistics show that the negro is not as moral as he was when freed it is due to the loss at once of the moral restraint and teaching of his master. Any observer can see that the bad negroes as a rule are the ignorant and the more reliable the intelligent.—Clarke County Times.

One-Armed Applause.

Mme. Bernhardt had just returned from a spin in a motor car. Her face was flushed and she wore a skirt of seal skin.

"Madame," said a reporter, who speaks French, "what do you regard as the greatest triumph of your career?"

The great artist smiled. "My greatest triumph?" she mused. "Well, I think, perhaps, my greatest triumph was in Paris, on the first night of 'L'Aiglon,' at the end of the third act."

"The third act was passionately applauded, but, as I stood before the curtain, the applause was drowned under a burst of laughter."

"The laughter came from the topmost gallery. The audience's eyes and my eyes, too, were turned reproachfully thither. And as we looked, the reproach died out of our faces. For what do you suppose we saw?"

"We saw two one-armed men standing up in the front row, side by side, quite oblivious of the amusement they created, co-operating with their remaining hands to add to the applause."

By the Way.

The crier had a bad cold, so that the duty of making the opening proclamation fell to another court officer who, as it happened, had never acted as crier, says the Green Bag. This officer had heard the proclamation often enough and knew it by heart, but this is what happened. The deputy sheriff opened the door and announced "Court!" The substitute crier rapped on his desk, and within and without the bar, those present arose and stood in silence while the judge passed to his place.

Then the substitute began: "Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye!" His voice seemed to him terribly loud, and all recollection of the words to follow suddenly left him, but he pulled himself together and went on bravely. "All persons having anything to do before the honorable, the justices of the Supreme Court in the jury session thereof now sitting at Boston within and for the county of Suffolk may draw near and give their attendance and they shall be heard."

At this point he sat down, but seeing the judge looking up in surprise, he saw his mistake, and springing to his feet he added:

"By the way, gentlemen, God save the commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The Honorable Joseph G. Cannon, boss of the House of Representatives, has indicated officially that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Eighteenth Illinois district again this year. After he gets it, there will likely be a stalwart Democrat camping on his trail from beginning to end of the campaign; and Mr. Cannon will know that somebody besides Yates is after him.

Denmark exchanges a king who was nearly 88 years of age for one who will be 63 on the third of June next by the succession of Frederick to the venerable monarch who recently passed away so suddenly. The new king is the father of eight children, the youngest of whom is 16 years of age. His oldest son, Prince Christian, who is now the heir apparent, was born in 1870 and will be 26 years of age on the 26th of next September. Prince Christian is the father of two boys, the eldest of whom, Prince Christian Frederick, was born in March, 1899.

Sir Hiram Maxim, the famous inventor, once remarked: "Man will never be able to fly by energy derived from his own muscles. To do that his lungs would have to weigh seventy-five pounds, the muscles of his arms forty pounds, and those of his chest seventy pounds, while he would have to be provided with a breast bone twenty-eight inches deep. Then, to bring his weight down a little, his legs would have to be reduced to the size of a walking cane, and his head to the size of an apple. Rather a queer kind of man, this."
